10 October 1960

I spent the day [REDACTED] and participated in the opening of the Senior Management Seminar which I thought got off to an excellent start. The enthusiasm of the group was very keen and the participation exceeded my expectations, with a very free exchange between the DD/I, DD/S and DD/P Components. I could not help but be impressed with the more aggressive attitudes of the DD/S and DD/P people as compared to DD/I. It will be interesting to see if this situation continues throughout the course. Professor [REDACTED] was very highly gratified with the participation and told me that he could tell from the first day that these "students" were of much higher caliber than he is accustomed to getting.
